THE FESTIVAL IN 32 IMAGES

67
Introduction

The 64th edition of the San Sebastian Festival could be defined as a balanced edition, positively appraised in the main by the media, with widespread media and industrial coverage and huge audience success.

The Official Selection was exceedingly heterogeneous, where some of the works by big-name hallowed directors joined (Oliver Stone, Bertrand Bonello, J.A. Bayona, Hong Sang-soo, Baltasar Kormákur, Emmanuelle Bercot, Alberto Rodríguez and Xiaogang Feng, among others) 6 competing debut movies.

The commitment to new talents becomes even stronger. In addition to the Film Students Meeting and the New Directors section, this year there were 6 debut films in the Official Competitive Selection.

There was an ample representation of film stars who accompanied the presentation of the films, treating the audience to their presence and turning the spotlight on San Sebastian as the focus of world news for nine days. Among others, Ethan Hawke and Sigourney Weaver (Donostia Awards), Gael García Bernal (Jaeger-LeCoulbre Latino Award), Monica Bellucci, Richard Gere, Isabelle Huppert, Javier Bardem, Eduard Fernández, Aitana Sánchez-Gijón, Leonor Watling, Ken Watanabe, Ángela Molina, Fan Bingbing, Cynthia Nixon, Hugh Grant, Inma Cuesta, José Coronado, Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Shailene Woodley, Ewan McGregor, Jennifer Connelly, Jorge Perugorría and Juana Acosta came to San Sebastian.

The list of prestigious directors who accompanied their films is also impressive: Amat Escalante, Bertrand Tavernier, Joao Pedro Rodrigues, Jia Zhangke, Paul Verhoeven, François Ozon, Gianfranco Rosi, Joachim Lafosse, Pablo Larrain and Hirozaku Koreeda, among others. In addition to all of those who participated in the Official Selection.

The Festival is still a Festival popular with the public. 175,267 spectators in 9 days is a truly spectacular figure representing a rise of 0.2% compared to 2015 and 13% compared to 2010 (155,060 spectators in 2010).

The number of accredited guests continues to rise. 3,845 compared to the 3,650 of 2015 (+5.34%) and to the 2,820 of 2010 (+36.3%).

The pledge to turn San Sebastian into a festival where one of the core pillars are industrial activities has borne fruit. Thanks to the Europe-Latin America Co-production Forum and Films in progress, the presence of film industry professionals continues to rise: 1,569 compared to the 1,495 of 2015 (+4.9%) and the 985 of 2010 (+59.3%).

Honorary Awards

Donostia Award
Ethan Hawke, actor, writer and director (USA)

“For me cinema is the church that I have chosen and festivals like this are sacred institutions. We are reaffirming our faith, love and hope in the power of cinema.”

Ethan Hawke
This award means so much to me, because, as some of you will know, San Sebastian was the very first festival I ever went to, in 1979, with a little film called Alien, which I actually hadn’t seen before that night.

Sigourney Weaver
Jaeger-LeCoultre Latin Cinema Award
Gael García Bernal, actor, director and producer (Mexico)

Zinemira Award
Ramón Barea, actor and director (Spain)

Gael García Bernal

“I’m very proud. It’s fantastic to see Latin American cinema in the limelight.”

Gael García Bernal

Ramón Barea

“Heartfelt thanks for this award, which has a special meaning for me, given that San Sebastian was my first event. It was right there on its red carpet that I discovered I could make cinema, and I took it seriously.”

Ramón Barea
Industry
The Festival’s Industry department, the Industry Club, provides industry guests and crews from the selected films with tools and activities to ensure that the professionals may go about their work in the best of conditions and that their stay in San Sebastian is as satisfactory as possible.

A total of 1,569 industry professionals attended the 64th edition of the Festival, representing 1,060 companies in 60 countries. This means a rise of 4.8% compared to 2015, and a sustained increase of 59% compared to 2010.

Over the nine days of the Festival, project presentations were organised and films were screened at different stages of production; there were also gatherings, meetings and round tables intended to foster co-productions and help promote the films and audiovisual projects in the different Festival sections.

The two most important professional activities, the Europe-Latin America Co-production Forum and Films in Progress, offered a meeting point for the international industry interested in the European and Latin American film worlds. One noteworthy new feature of the year was the EFADs-CACI Europe-Latin America Co-Production Forum Award, given by the European Film Agency Directors Association (EFADs) and the Conferencia de Autoridades Cinematográficas de Iberoamérica (CACI), consisting of €20,000 for the majority producer of one of the projects selected for the V Coproduction Forum.

For the second year running the workshop Audiences in Motion, Listening to the User was organised jointly with Creative Europe Media and with the collaboration of San Sebastian, European Capital of Culture 2016.

Also running throughout the Festival was the Industry Club space at the Kursaal centre, where meetings were enabled between accredited guests and there were different areas for presentations, professional meetings, round tables and other activities, such as the XII Lau Haizetara Documentary Co-production Forum, organised by the Basque Producers Association, IBAIA. Similarly organised in this area is the Festival Film Library for the online viewing of films programmed at the Festival.

Yet again this year, the Industry Club acknowledges the essential support of the Basque Government Department of Economic Development and Competitiveness and of Creative Europe MEDIA.
The Co-production Forum is a platform for presenting developing projects received and selected in response to a call for submissions, including pitching sessions and one-to-one meetings between the project representatives and interested professionals. In this edition, accredited professionals enjoyed a first-hand look at a selection of 17 projects, mostly unreleased, from Europe and Latin America.

The San Telmo Museum Cloister was set up as a networking area where industry guests could arrange meetings with the help of a team of matchmakers. Breakfasts, lunches and Happy Hours were laid on for the guests in this space.

Meanwhile, in the Function Hall different Round Tables and Presentations took place, where professionals exchanged experiences and addressed interesting issues, such as the latest trends in the field of audiovisuals, co-productions, distribution and new business models.
Selected projects

194 projects from 28 countries were submitted to Co-production Forum. The Festival selection committee selected 16 projects based on preliminary reports drawn up by three international experts: Javier Martín, Manuel Pérez Estremera and Andrea Stavenhagen. In addition to the above, a project from the Workshop to Develop Projects from Central America and the Caribbean participated in the Forum (not competing for an award) under the Festival’s agreement with the Ibermedia Programme.

Focus on Nordic Glocal

This year the San Sebastian Festival promoted a Focus on Nordic Glocal at the V Europe-Latin America Co-production Forum. A delegation of professionals from Iceland, Denmark and Norway came to San Sebastian to discover the Festival first hand, make professional contacts and participate in the Co-production Forum and the other industry activities.

This Focus is preceded by creation of the Glocal Cinemas Network, promoted by the Basque Government Department of Education, Language Policy and Culture, and was the starting point for the creation of this new Industry activity in 2017. Glocal in Progress consists of the screening of European films in non-hegemonic languages at the post-production stage to an audience of producers, distributors, sales agents and programmers capable of contributing to their completion and international circulation.

European Film Forum - Audiences In Motion
Listening to the User

Audiences in Motion celebrated its second edition during the 64th San Sebastian Festival. This year the event was entitled: Audiences in Motion: Listening to the User, analysing the central role played by the public in the production, distribution and exhibition of audiovisual content in the digital era.

The event, jointly organised by the San Sebastian Festival and Creative Europe MEDIA with the collaboration of San Sebastian, European Capital of Culture 2016, falls within the European Film Forum, a platform created by the European Commission to facilitate structured dialogue between policymakers and agents in the audiovisual sector with a view to developing strategic policies for successfully tackling the challenges and opportunities generated by the digital revolution.

At Audiences in Motion, Listening to the User practical cases of public participation were presented together with examples of managing social media by means of data analysis as the epicentre of the digital conversation.

The event was divided into two panels moderated by Elena Neira from LA OTRA PANTALLA (Spain) and was attended by Martin Dawson from the EUROPEAN COMMISSION – CREATIVE EUROPE MEDIA (Belgium) and Stefan Schmitz from AVALON (Spain) who introduced the event.

Panel 1
Audience participation
Speakers: Marianne Furevold, NRK (Norway); Fernando López Puig, TVE (Spain); Camille Lopato, DIVERSION (France).

Panel 2
Distribution: understanding European audiences
Speakers: Felipe Pontón, TELEFÓNICA-MOVISTAR+ (Spain); Arturo Guillén, COMSCORE (USA); and Tania Sutherland, MUBI (USA).

The conclusions of the Event were formulated by Dag Asbjørnsen, EUROPEAN COMMISSION – CREATIVE EUROPE MEDIA (Belgium).
The Lau Haizetara Documentary Co-production Forum is promoted by IBAIA (Association of Independent Audiovisual Producers of the Basque Country) in collaboration with the Industry Club. Its core objective is to provide a meeting point for professionals interested in documentaries with a view to promoting co-production relationships between producers in the regions of Europe.

The event was structured into a morning session where the selected projects were presented to a panel of European Commissioning Editors; and an afternoon conference at which Ove Rishøj Jensen (Film Consultant of the European Documentary Network) gave examples of good practices in distribution strategies and of launches of the latest successful documentaries.

The Commissioning Editors panel was made up of different European televisions and distributors: Aintzane Pérez del Palomar, EITB (Spain); Andrés Luque Pérez, TVE (Spain); Anne Charbonnel ARTE FRANCE (France); Claudia Schreiner, ARD / MITTELDEUTSCHER RUNDFUNK (Germany); Elena Mera Dios, TREELINE DISTRIBUTION (Spain); Iñigo Trojaola, Movistar+ (Spain); Jordi Ambrós Hortensi, TV3 (Spain); Mohammed Belhaj, ALJAZEERA DOCUMENTARY CHANNEL (Qatar); and Pentti Väliahdet, YLE (Finland).

Festival Video Library

The Festival Video Library offered industry guests an online platform (in collaboration with Cinando VL) for the streaming of registered films (from the first day of the Festival until a month after it ends).

The films registered in the Video Library were:
- Feature films selected for the Festival (59 films).
- Spanish (3) and Latin American (5) films by production companies which included films of the year in their catalogue, having paid the corresponding fee.
- Sales agents were able to register a second film (of the year) from their catalogue for every selected film registered to participate in the platform (27 films).
- The previous works of directors in the Co-production Forum (5) and the previous works of directors in Films in Progress (2).
- Films to have participated in previous editions of the Co-production Forum (2).

The six films viewed most during the period were:

- Que Dios nos perdone: 169 viewings
- Manda huevos: 97 viewings
- Cien años de perdón: 79 viewings
- After Love: 69 viewings
- Playground: 67 viewings
- Kalebegia: 65 viewings
