68 moments at the 68th Festival 92
In last year’s rundown, we opened with references to records (of audience attendance, of accreditation numbers, of takings for films submitted and the rental of billboards). Even then we warned that it was difficult to grow further and that San Sebastian Festival had been approaching its growth ceiling for years. We could never have imagined then that the percentages would drop between 30% and 70% at the 68th edition, and even less so that we would consider these figures to be positive.

But, indeed, in 2020 the Festival’s focus was elsewhere. Like so many other local cultural businesses and institutions, this was an edition marked by the COVID-19 pandemic and our aims were reduced to three: that it be a safe edition for all participants, that it protect the essence of our Festival concept, in other words, that the best place to screen a film is in a cinema and, lastly, that it achieve an economically viable edition.

In addition to having registered no infections and having attracted the interest of more than 1,000 film industry professionals, and almost 700 journalists from 376 media outlets, the Festival introduced a number of structural changes from which it has emerged unscathed, having also increased its online presence. In view of the results and the way these measures were received, we are now considering whether to maintain some of these new features, such as pre-assigned seating or combined online and physical activities for the film industry, once the pandemic is finally over. We believe, because that’s what we’ve been told, that the having held the Festival was enormously important for the Spanish film industry in general, the Basque industry in particular, and the international industry as a whole. Media outlets all over the world have praised our programme and organisation.

The challenge of the pandemic, which continues to cast uncertainty over film festivals in 2021, is not the only challenge taken up by the Festival. Added to this are the conviction of its commitment to new talents, which is producing results earlier than expected in the coming together between participants at the Co-Production Forum, Nest, New Directors and the Official Selection, the Ikusmira Berriak residents and students at the Elías Querejeta Zine Eskola; its commitment to the gender identity report, which is now joined by a sustainability project and creation of the Thought and Discussion area, and, tied in with all of these initiatives, the reaffirmation of its configuration as a Festival running all year round, which will be intensified with its presence in and with the Tabakalera community throughout 2021.

Nest gathers students from film schools all over the world, who bring previously selected works in order that they may participate in the screenings of their short films, as well as in the discussions. Exceptionally this year, the jury was made up of three winning students from the last editions. The jury chooses the winning film, recipient of the Nest best short film award, sponsored by Orona Fundazioa, from among the thirteen works presented. This accolade, going to the director of the chosen project, comes with 10,000 euros.

Nest is organised in collaboration with the Tabakalera International Centre for Contemporary Culture, and is part of the legacy of San Sebastián 2016, European Capital Culture.

Section dedicated to Basque cinema and to films in the Basque language, organised by the San Sebastian Festival and the Basque Government Department of Culture, with the sponsorship of Irizar and EITB, and the collaboration of the Filmoteca Vasca, EPE/APV, IBAIA and Zineuskadi.

All feature films with at least 20% Basque production released worldwide as part of the San Sebastian Festival’s global programme, and those mainly spoken in the Basque language compete for the Irizar Basque Film Award, sponsored by Irizar. The Irizar Award is decided by a specific jury and comes with 20,000 euros gross for the producer or producers of the winning film.

Zinemira also includes the selection of short films in the Kimuak programme, an initiative by the Basque Government Department of Culture and the Filmoteca Vasca under which the best Basque short films of the year enjoy international circulation.

The Festival and the EPE/AVE and IBAIA producers associations also present the Zinemira Award to the career of an outstanding personality from the world of Basque cinema.

Movies for kids
Movies for kids

For more than three decades, the San Sebastian Film Festival has been bringing films to children thanks to its Movies for Kids section, featuring the premieres of films dubbed into Basque –thanks to the collaboration of Zineuskadi as part of the Zinema euskaraz programme- especially focussed on the new generations of spectators.

On weekends during the Festival, sessions are programmed for a family audience in different cinemas throughout the city.

Movies for Kids section is sponsored by Amenabar, in the frame of its agreement as Festival Official Collaborator.

Belodromoa ikaste-txeetan
Belodromoa ikastetxeetan

For the second year running, the Donostia International Physics Center (DIPC) and Filmoteca Vasca have programmed a film for schools thanks to the collaboration of the San Sebastian Festival through the initiative Belodromoa ikastetxeetan. This time round, the chosen title was Harrapatu bandera (Atrapa la bandera), which was dubbed into Basque for the occasion. Hundreds of schoolchildren throughout Gipuzkoa aged from 6 to 11 years were able to enjoy the film in their classroom.

The Covid-19 pandemic has put the velodrome out of use as a giant film theatre, meaning that this year, exceptionally, the screenings for schoolchildren moved into the classrooms. However, the activity renamed ‘Belodromoa ikastetxeetan’ maintained its essence and once again combined the magic of cinema with science, given that the screening had the recorded video presentation of Eneko Axpe, a Basque physicist who works for the NASA and at Stanford University.

Surprise film

San Sebastian Festival’s surprise film was Sportin’ Life, the latest work from Abel Ferrara, who came to San Sebastian to present it.

During lockdown, the director of movies such as Bad Lieutenant (1992) and The Funeral (1996) filmed a 68-minute documentary released at Venice Festival and featuring his wife, Cristina Chiriac, his daughter Anna and friends including actors Willem Dafoe (image of the official poster for this year’s Festival) and Paul Hipp as well as the musician Joe Delia, together with moments lived at the last Berlin Festival when he showed Siberia combined with images of deserted New York and Rome.

The surprise film is sponsored by Amenabar, Official Festival Collaborator.

Films-to-be
Films-to-be

As well as selecting and screening films for an audience of spectators, specialised media and film industry professionals, San Sebastian Festival promotes developing projects and films (the so-called ‘works in progress’). The Festival has two programmes for films in post-production: WIP Latam for Latin American productions, and WIP Europa for European productions.

It also promotes three calls for projects: the Ikusmira Berriak residency for Project development, offering space, context and time (eight weeks) to five audiovisual proposals; the Europe-Latin America Co-production Forum, an initiative for film projects in development from Europe and Latin America, which helps producers to find partners on both sides of the Atlantic while achieving stronger Access to the international market; and Zinemaldia Startup Challenge, a competition for new European companies with technology-based projects applied to the audiovisual sector.

Furthermore, the Festival co-organise Proyecta – a presentation of cinematic projects seeking co-production between Europe and Latin America – together with Ventana Sur, Latin America’s biggest film market, and the Producers Network – Marché du Film at the Festival de Cannes, also collaborating in the Lau Haizetara Documentary Co-Production Forum, promoted by IBAIA (Association of Audiovisual Producers of the Basque Country).

In view of the situation caused by Covid-19, the industry activities were held in a combined physical and online format.

The Festival enjoys the backing of the Basque Government Department of Economic Development and infrastructures and of Creative Europe MEDIA to carry out activities focussed on the film industry. Access to these activities was available through the Industry Online area of the Festival website, a space with new features offering online access to the programme of professional activities. In addition this year, an online accreditation was exceptionally introduced for industry professionals unable to travel to San Sebastián.
IX Europe-Latin America Co-production Forum

Films-to-be

The Europe-Latin America Co-Production Forum is a platform for the presentation of film projects at the development stage from both Europe and Latin America. In its ninth edition, eighteen projects have been selected from among the 235 submitted from 23 countries, mostly from Latin America. The selection’s most outstanding features are the diversity of the proposals and the profile of the participating filmmakers and producers, uniting new talents with internationally recognised figures.

To guarantee the participation of the teams corresponding to the selected projects and of the industry professionals, exceptionally this edition, the Co-Production Forum ran virtually through the Festival website. In this area, accredited guests were able to access information on the selected projects, including video pitchings for the projects, as well as being able to hold one-to-one meetings.

VI. Ikusmira berriak

81 one-to-one meetings
(58 in 2019)

Ikusmira Berriak, the programme of residencies for the development of audiovisual projects, is jointly organised by Tabakalera - International Centre for Contemporary Culture, the Elías Querejeta Zine Eskola and the San Sebastian Festival.

The programme, which this year celebrates its sixth edition, supports each selected project with a development grant of 5,000 euros.

The first part of the residency runs from March to April. For six weeks, the residents work on the development of their projects. The second part, taking place in September, coincides with the Festival dates. Here, the filmmakers return to San Sebastian to complete the last two weeks of the residency, bringing their projects at a more developed stage to share them with the film industry. This year, exceptionally, and in keeping with the current situation, this second part of the residency took place online.

In 2019, the San Sebastian Festival launched a new industry initiative to address the influence of digital technologies on the audiovisual field, while also promoting business entrepreneurship. This led to the creation of the Zinemaldia Startup Challenge, the Europe-wide competition promoted by the Basque Government Department of Economic Development and Infrastructures, especially intended for recently created startups with projects involving technological innovation applied to the audiovisual ecosystem.

In view of the situation due to Covid-19, the third edition of the Zinemaldia Startup Challenge was exclusively online. The five selected projects competed for the Zinemaldia Startup Challenge and had the possibility to accelerate the development of their project in an incubation space at one of the BICs (Business Innovation Centre). The finalists defended their proposals by means of online pitches to the jury.

The Zinemaldia Startup Challenge is part of the Zinemaldia & Technology initiative which also includes a masterclass.

The event was jointly organised by the San Sebastian Festival, Tecnalia, Petronor and Tabakalera, with the collaboration of Vicomtech, in addition to the backing of Creative Europe Media through the European Film Forum initiative.
In its 68th edition, the San Sebastian Festival launched a new work in progress, WIP Latam, which substitutes the pioneering Films in Progress, after a run of eighteen years, and with a same objective: to back the production of Latin American cinema for the completion of films at the post-production stage.

A selection of six films was presented by their directors and producers to an audience of professionals in order that they may contribute to their completion and international circulation. WIP Latam, together with WIP Europa (the revamped Glocal in Progress) and the Europe-Latin American Co-production Forum consolidate the Festival as a meeting point between both film industries.

The films participating in WIP Latam competed for the WIP Latam Industry Award and for the new EGEDA Platino Industry Award for best WIP Latam, sponsored by EGEDA, the Audiovisual Producers’ Rights Management Association.

Films in Progress 2019 enabled completion of the film by Fernanda Valadez, Sin señas particulares / Identifying Features, winner of the Best Screenplay and Audience Awards at the last Sundance Festival and selected for San Sebastian Festival’s Horizontes Latinos section, where it received the Horizontes and Cooperación Española Awards.

Since it started, Films in Progress, and from now on WIP Latam, have and continue to enjoy the backing of the Ibermedia Programme and of the companies who participate in the Industry Award.

Advice on internationalisation for Basque projects

Yet another year, Creative Europe Desk MEDIA Euskadi - Zineuskadi joined the Festival to provide an advisory service for film projects with international vocation. An initiative for producers with feature film projects at the development and/or shooting stage, intended to provide them with a solid starting point for the internationalisation of their projects and the search for new partners during the Festival.

This year, the advisor was Pablo Iraola from Ukbar Filmes (Portugal), a producer with long and proven experience in co-production with Africa, Europe and Latin America. A first session took place in July in preparation for finding new partners during the Festival. The aim was to guide the selected professionals towards the internationalisation of their projects, as well as helping them to find partners and financing.

Honorary Awards

Viggo Mortensen

Actor and filmmaker, Donostia Award

“In one way or another, Covid-19 has screwed us all and will continue to screw us for some time to come, but it is only another stumbling block in our existence. We have always lived with uncertainty, although perhaps we are more aware of that at this time. Uncertainty is the law of life, but don’t let us forget that life is a gift. We must continue to forge ahead, accompanying those who are alone and honouring those who are no longer here, doing it the best we can to the best of our imagination. Gora Donostia Zinemaldia! Long live the cinema!”
Honorary Awards

Sara Bilbatua

Casting director, Zinemira Award

“I want to encourage future female filmmakers to produce films, to direct them and, above all, to write them, because I know that it is very important for society to improve. I also want to share this award with actors and actresses because they are our source of inspiration and work: thanks to this precious Zinemira award, I want to tell them that I deeply admire them and that I respect their work and, above all, their talent”
Reflection and discussion
Reflection and discussion

The Festival wishes to highlight its nature as a place to meet and convey knowledge through Reflection and discussion, an umbrella for activities promoting discussion on the cinema from an industrial, creative and educational point of view and programmes generating opportunities of agreements and business for creators, producers and distributors. Figuring in this scope are initiatives ranging from masterclasses and film talks, open to badge holders and to the general public, including activities specifically addressed to film industry professionals and the specialised media and conversations on relevant subjects for the sector, the Zinemaldia & Technology presentations, the meetings between festival programmers and debates on the phenomenon of series.

The area for reflection and discussion on the cinema runs throughout the year at the Elias Querejeta Zine Eskola, promoted by the Provincial Council of Gipuzkoa, where the Festival, with Tabakalera and the Filmoteca Vasca, has conceptualised a centre for thought, research, experimental practice and pedagogical innovation on the subject of the past, present and future of the cinema. One of the results of the collaboration with the EQZE is the research project Zinemaldia 70. All possible stories, created to generate a living archive to foster reflection and discussion on the past, present and future of the Festival through its document collection (letters, photographs, reviews and mentions published in newspapers and magazines, books, etc.) compiled since 1953.
How many stories do seven decades in the life of an international film festival have to tell? How can we re-encounter the memory and the material traces of the myriad cinematic, political, social and personal aspects that have shaped the San Sebastian Festival since its foundation in 1953?

The San Sebastian Festival has created, together with the Elías Querejeta Zine Eskola (EQZE) research department, the project Zinemaldi 70: all possible stories (Z70) with a view to generating a living Festival archive. The first stage of the project will culminate in 2022, coinciding with the Festival’s 70th anniversary. The initiative has the collaboration of Tabakalera-International Centre for Contemporary Culture and the sponsorship of Loterías y Apuestas del Estado.

The Z70 project highlights the importance of the Festival’s document collections (letters, photographs, reviews and articles in newspapers and magazines, books, etc.), stored in its archive since 1953. The core objective of the project is to prompt reflection and discussion on the past, present and future of the Festival, as well as dialogues critical with cinematic creation and contemporary thought.

The project involves transferring all of the Festival’s archive material to the Tabakalera building, where it is examined, prepared and catalogued to guarantee its conservation in the Filmoteca Vasca facilities. In 2022, the archive will be available for public consultation either physically or online, through a selection of digitized contents. Consultation of the collection will include themed spotlights based on the research developed by a team of post-graduate students at the Elías Querejeta Zine Eskola directed by the researcher Pablo La Parra Pérez in collaboration with the different Festival Departments.

The research spotlights stress little known or unknown aspects of the Festival’s history. To reveal its results until 2022, two lines of work proceed simultaneously and in connection with one another. On the one hand, specialised research material (academic articles, presentations at congresses, own editorial projects, seminars, etc.) is generated in the endeavour to create a critical dialogue with the latest developments in the academic field of film studies. On the other hand, a number of public programmes is organised (conferences, exhibitions, courses), aimed at wider publics.
Beyond Covid-19: Revitalising the European audiovisual industry

San Sebastian Festival’s European Film Forum ran on Tuesday September 22 and was broadcast live on the Festival website, where a number of reflections were made on the challenges and opportunities faced by the European audiovisual industry in the context caused by Covid-19. An in-depth analysis was also made of how this situation may affect the European audiovisual sector, which was already going through a process of transformation in its structure and business models as a result of the digital revolution.

The event assembled representatives of regulating bodies and national and European funds, associations, independent platforms and professionals, who explained their vision and analysed possible measures for recovery of the sector, as well as entrepreneurial and collaborative solutions for the future.

Lucía Recalde. Head of the Audiovisual Industry and Media Support Programmes Unit, European Commission (Belgium)

“This conference is a marvellous opportunity to help the industry to reinvent itself and to be able to truly prosper in the coming years”.

Luis Chaby. President of the Board of Directors of the ICA (Institute of Cinema and Audiovisual, Portugal)

“I’m certain that all of this shared effort will be enormously helpful for a sector that has been seriously affected by this crisis”.

Peter Dinges. CEO FFA - German Federal Film Board (Germany)

“In Germany we’re now investing in promotion to tempt audiences back to the cinemas and bring more money to the brave theatres that reopen their doors to welcome the public”.

Iole Maria Giannattasio. Coordinator of the Research Unit, DG Cinema e Audiovisivo, Mibact (Italy)

“This crisis only accelerated issues and trends that were already there”.

Álvaro Longoria. President of the European Producers Club. Producer and member of Morena Films (Spain)

“We believe that the European authorities and the European Commission must take the initiative to present measures endeavouring to compensate for the imbalance that has now been created”.

François Yon. Partner and Head of Sales and Business Development of the Playtime Group (France)

“San Sebastian is, like Venice, proof that you can still hold a major event in times of Covid. It’s a bit different, but it exists and it creates an enormous amount of energy around it”.

Alex Martinez Roig. Content Manager at Movistar+ (Spain)

“The main difference is that the audience decides. They decide whether they want to watch a story told in 25 minutes or in two hours with a big budget. We have to understand this: it is all cinema; it all reaches the audience”.

Joxean Muñoz, advisor, Basque Government Department of Culture and Language Policy

“It is important to develop digital logics and technologies which go deeper into the European ideology, into values such as social, cultural and language diversity; the public backing of creation; the commitment to creative women and democracy”.

Beatriz Navas, Director of the Institute of Cinematography and Audiovisual Arts (ICAA, Spain)

“It is essential to strengthen the cultural industries, among which is the audiovisual sector, as well as digitalization, sustainability and territorial cohesion”.

Gilles Fontaine, Head of the Department for Market Information at the European Audiovisual Observatory (France)

“The audiovisual sector was already suffering profound transformations and Covid-19 has accelerated these pre-existing tendencies. We are facing a change of Business model”.

Reflection and discussion
In 2018, San Sebastian Festival launched Zinemaldia & Technology, a strategic move by the Festival in its aim to become a space for technological and audiovisual innovation. In its third edition, Zinemaldia & Technology included the masterclass given by sound technician and head and creative director of sound at Deluxe Marc Orts, five-time winner of the Goya for best sound, as well as presentation of the projects selected for the Zinemaldia Startup Challenge, a competition for entrepreneurs and recently created startups proposing new entrepreneurial projects based on the application of digital technologies to the audiovisual field. The five finalist projects defended their proposals before a jury, which decided the winner of the Zinemaldia Startup Challenge Award.

Masterclass
Audiovisual sound: from its origins to Full Immersive

Marc Orts: “Artificial intelligence use is still rather limited and is only used for certain automated technical processes because there are still no robots with ears, that can listen and realise what’s right and what’s wrong. Sound design needs somebody who brings a creative, emotional or sensory component”
Francisco Ramos is Vice-President of Spanish-Language Originals for Netflix in Latin America. He was born in Mexico in 1968. He spent his early years in Mexico City, finishing high school in 1986, at the American High School, and later attended the Law School at UNAM. Following his graduation, he moved to Spain in 1991, where he lived until joining Netflix in 2017. In Spain he worked at Grupo Zeta and at Antena 3 Televisión, where he was head of acquisitions and programming. He also worked at Aurum Producciones, which at that time was the leading independent distributor in Spain and the distributor for New Line, Morgan Creek, Spyglass and Miramax, amongst others. It was during his tenure at Aurum that he started to produce movies and television. In late 2000, Francisco left Aurum Producciones and began his career as an independent producer. From 2009 to 2017 he produced projects for Grupo Zeta’s audiovisual arm. Over the course of his career he has produced more than 50 films and television shows. The session was conducted by Elena Neira and had two producers, Agustina Chiarino (Mutante Cine, Uruguay) and Olmo Figueredo (La Claqueta PC, Spain), as speakers.

“Language is not an obstacle; what is a barrier is ambition, quality, perspective, diversity and complexity of the point of view. Anglo-Saxon content is no longer the only universal language”

Aaron Sorkin

Aaron Sorkin (New York, USA. 1961) is a North American screenwriter, producer, playwright and actor. He debuted in cinema with A Few Good Men (1992), a film based on his play of the same name, where some of the traits that would later characterise his work were starting to make their appearance: plots focused on the mechanisms of power, tensions within an organization or personal relationships in atmospheres of stress at work. All of this, always, with sharp and intelligent dialogues between their characters.

Since then, Sorkin has worked both for film and television and is behind the success of titles including David Fincher’s The Social Network (2010) about the birth of Facebook with which he won the Academy Award for best adapted screenplay; Moneyball (2012); Steve Jobs (2015), for which he carried off, a second time, the Golden Globe for best screenplay; the hit political fiction series The West Wing (1999-2006), Sports Night (1998-2000) and The Newsroom (2012-2014), both focused on the world of journalism.

His masterclass at San Sebastian Festival coincides with the Netflix premiere (October 2020) of his latest film The Trial of the Chicago 7, written and directed by him.

“William Goldman, my mentor, used to tell me that I write as if I was on a first date and was desperate to make sure I get a second one”
Few people know today’s film industry landscape in the same depth as Ted Hope. Having garnered 12 Academy Awards during his career, Hope has been a witness and leading light in the main transformations experienced by the film industry in recent decades. In the 90s, his production company Good Machine played a key part in New York’s indie movie boom, with the boost of emerging directors including Ang Lee (The Wedding Banquet, 1993) and the production of films to have landed awards internationally such as Happiness (Todd Solondz, 1998). His second production company, This is That, promoted feature films including 21 grams (Alejandro González Iñárritu, 2003) and Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind (Michel Gondry, 2004), which harvested nominations and awards from Venice Festival to the Oscars. After the crisis suffered by the indie scene and his spell as director of the San Francisco Film Society, Hope played an outstanding part in the world of digital content distribution and production. Having directed the streaming platform Fandor, specialized in independent films, Hope became part of the team responsible for setting in motion, expanding and consolidating Amazon Studios between 2015 and 2020, with the launch of original titles such as The Aeronauts (Tom Harper, 2019) and Troop Zero (Bert Bertie, 2019) and the distribution of films like Manchester by the Sea (Kenneth Lonergan, 2016), Cold War (Paweł Pawlikowski, 2018), Forushande (Salesman, Asghar Farhadi; 2016 ), and The Handmaiden (Park Chan-wook).

His masterclass in San Sebastian coincides with his return to the world of independent production and with the publication of a revised and extended edition of his book Hope for Film (Counterpoint Press), with two new chapters on his experience in the world of platforms and the dilemmas, successes and failures he faced in this new territory that has transformed today’s film industry.

“There’s no right way or wrong way to be a producer, there are probably 25 different ways that people do it. I look at my role as lifting the good into the great, and that’s across projects, processes and people. It’s a huge challenge”
Reflection and discussion

Kafea. Un Nespresso con...

Juan Cavestany director, screenwriter, producer (Un efecto óptico, Zabaltegi-Tabakalera)
“The film is based on the observation of the tourist as an actor in search of a character in a strange, exotic location. Its script is a guide guide; it is the start of an adventure with some rules that can change”.

Carla Simón (Correspondence, Zabaltegi-Tabakalera)
“Making cinema is very long and slow, it is anything but instant art, and filmed letters are the nearest thing to cinema as an instant art, a free and spontaneous format”.

Santiago Loza (Co-director of Edición ilimitada and producer of Nosotros nunca moriremos, by Eduardo Crespo)
“For me, the fact that the Festival has taken place is an act of hope. It is the feeling that cinema too can be a place of shelter and safety”.

A Festival all year round
Traditionally, since their birth in the ‘30s of last century, film festivals have been linked to a physical space, to a specific duration and to physical attendance, as a meeting point. In recent years these three vectors are no longer as clear-cut or obvious: travelling and online festivals have proliferated. Although the San Sebastian Festival has extended its activity to other countries through collaborations with other festivals, and although its programme already includes digital content related with professional activities, the characteristic of the historic definition of a film festival that it seeks to challenge most is its duration.

We are convinced that the festivals of the future or, at least, the future of the San Sebastian Festival depends on its activity, involvement and influence continuing throughout the year. This idea has been intensely reinforced over the last five years: added to the usual 12 months’ work of selection and collaboration with festivals and programmes, we have added, in chronological order, impetus to the Ikusmira Berriak audiovisual development residencies, the programme on the public screen in Tabakalera, foundation of the Elías Querejeta Zine Eskola, which has not only represented an opportunity for the Festival but has also forced it to rethink itself, and the consequent creation of the Festival’s department of Thought and discussion.

With the partnerships between institutions and participation in cinematic programmes running all year long, the Festival seeks to fulfil a double objective. On the one hand, it aims to become a hothouse for cultivating cinematic talent throughout the year; a talent which later blossoms and becomes visible during the actual nine days of the event. On the other, it wants to be a festival that thinks about itself. And that also thinks about the place held by film festivals in today’s world, film industry and creation.

To understand this strategic commitment we have to look at the context of the San Sebastian Festival: housed in the building of the Centre for Contemporary Culture, Tabakalera, home to its offices, and to the institutions which are its travelling companions in this initiative: the Tabakalera cultural programme, the Filmoteca Vasca, and the self-same EQZE.

The exchanges and collaborations taking place between the Tabakalera cultural programme, the Elias Querejeta Zine Eskola and the Filmoteca Vasca can be found on film programmes all year long, turning the Festival into an event that lasts for 365 days. We could categorise this activity into seven main areas:

1. The Programme

The Tabakalera cinema screen is a public screen programmed jointly by the aforementioned institutions (in addition to which are the Donostia Kultura Cinema Unit) offering spectators a shared programme. The Festival participates with the Zabaltegi Tabakalera showings (also in its extended version, Zabaltegi - Tabakalera Plus) and with the Nest short films. From 2021 onwards, the Festival will assume new lines of work, such as the tribute showings related to the Donostia Awards of the edition, cartes blanches.

The synergies also affect the guests: filmmakers and professionals who give tutorials, masterclasses and workshops or visits shared by the institutions. Thus, for example, EQZE tutors such as Oliver Laxe or Salomé Lamas have given workshops and tutorials to the Ikusmira Berriak residents. Professionals invited to the Festival in Construction subject will also be given carte blanche to programme films in the Tabakalera cinema.

2. Research and publications

The San Sebastian Festival seeks to foster study and research in subjects related to cinema. The Festival, Tabakalera, EQZE and the Filmoteca Vasca also join forces to carry out research work related to the cinema, such as the Zinemaldia 70. All possible histories archive project seeking to highlight the importance of the Festival’s collection of documents (letters, photographs, reviews and articles in newspapers and magazines, books, etc.), kept in its files since 1953. The main aim of the project is to generate reflection and discussion on the past, present and future of the Festival, as well as dialogue critical with cinematic creation and contemporary thought. Two alumni from the EQZE archive specialty have joined this project in a professional capacity.

From 2021, the Festival will also participate in the joint organisation (together with EQZE and the Filmoteca Vasca) and editorial board of Zine, the publication on research into the cinema. In addition, it also plans to publish research work resulting from the study of the San Sebastian Festival collection.

3. Public programmes

In the context of the project Zinemaldia 70. All possible stories, a programme is organised annually for the public. On December 2019, the Festival started to share its archives with the citizens; it served to take a look at the transformation experienced by the Festival in the early years of the Transition. In 2020 two public programmes have been organised in relation to the project. On the one hand, the exhibition at the Artium Basque Centre-

Museum of Contemporary Art, jointly organised with the EQZE, entitled: The Festival has had 24 editions: We don’t like it. On the other they organised the University of the Basque Country (UPV/ EHU) Summer Course Critical approaches to film festivals.

4. Collections

The Festival has an archive of footage, photographs and general documents covering its almost seven decades. This archive is currently being prepared and catalogued and will be made available for consultation to the general public and specialized researchers.

However, in addition, the Tabakalera building houses the historical collection of the Filmoteca Vasca as well as the new collection that the EQZE is starting to generate. EQZE is developing with Medialab the Z-A project, an archive and documentation centre on how love to cinema is conveyed. It will gather specific funds from filmmakers, institutions and groups, as well as bibliography and filmography. The foundational fund is made up of Andrei Tarkovsky’s Lost Lessons (sound archives of the conferences he gave in the 70s and 80s in the USSR), but other very diverse funds will also be added, such as the sound diaries of Pier Paolo Pasolini during the filming of Mamma Roma or the first cinema courses given in the context of the Festival.
5. Training

The San Sebastian Festival has shown strong strategic commitment to become a benchmark platform at international level for training and transferring knowledge, project development and the professionalisation of filmmakers.

Elías Querejeta Zine Eskola (EQZE). The Festival has participated in both the conceptualisation and academic management of this international centre of thought, research, experimental practice and pedagogical innovation around the past, present and future of the cinema, created by the Provincial Council of Gipuzkoa in 2017.

Nest. Tabakalera and the San Sebastian Festival jointly organise Nest (the International Film Students Meeting), a section which unites students from film schools all over the world, in order that they may participate in the screening of their short films, talks and masterclasses given by industry professionals.

Ikusmira Berriak. Is a programme providing support to audiovisual projects born in 2015. It comes with a yearly programme of residencies for the development of projects and a series of grants for the selected works. The objective of the residency, running for eight weeks, is to offer space, context and time for creative development.

6. Films-to-be

As well as selecting and showing films to an audience of spectators, specialised media and film industry professionals, the San Sebastian Festival promotes developing projects and films (the so-called works in progress). The Festival has two programmes for films at the post-production stage: WIP Latam for Latin American productions and WIP Europa for European productions. EGEDA grants the EGEDA Platino Industria Award for the Best WIP Latam, carrying EUR 30,000.

The Festival also issues three calls for submissions: the Ikusmira Berriak project development residency, the Europe - Latin America Co-Production Forum, an initiative for film projects in development from Europe and Latin America, which helps producers to find partners on both sides of the Atlantic and improve their access to the international market; and Zinemaldia Startup Challenge, a competition for new European businesses with technological projects applied to the audiovisual sector.

The Festival also participates in Proyecta, an initiative created in 2018 to promote co-productions in Latin America and with Europe, jointly organised by Ventana Sur and the San Sebastian Festival. Proyecta is a presentation of projects searching for international partners, co-producers and sales agents.

7. Other screenings

Once the Festival is over, its programme travels to the Azkuna Zentroa (Bilbao) and to the Golem cinemas (Pamplona).

It is also present at the Gijon Festival thanks to the Crossroads programme.

Elías Querejeta Zine Eskola

Elías Querejeta Zine Eskola (EZQE) is an international centre of thought, research, experimental practice and pedagogical innovation on the past, present and future of cinema. It was created in 2017 by the Provincial Council of Gipuzkoa. The three postgraduate programmes of EZQE, Curating Preservation and Filmmaking studies, come from the fields of expertise of the three agents involved in their conceptualisation: the San Sebastian Festival, Filmoteca Vasca and Tabakalera, Centro Internacional de Cultura Contemporánea, the sites of these institutions.

The uniqueness of its origin and location, its idea of cinema and its educational project have made it a centre of international renown. In fact, in September the students of the second EQZE class joined the school from countries such as Argentina, Australia, Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia, South Korea, Cuba, Ecuador, the United States, Finland, Italy, Mexico, Peru, Portugal, the Dominican Republic and Uruguay. Among the 45 people selected for the 2019/2020 school year are filmmakers with works that have premiered and won awards at festivals or have been exhibited in art galleries; students and alumni trained in other film and arts schools around the world; graduates in many cultural disciplines; specialists from the world of film production and distribution; curators with experience in production, management and programming; researchers, professionals from the world of photography and design...

The Festival is part of EQZE’s Academic Management and teaches a subject (Festival in Construction), whose objective is to rethink the event together with students and film professionals such as Thierry Frémaux, Carlo Chatrian, Vincent Maraval, Paolo Moretti, Jérome Paillard, Ilse Hughan, Domingo Corral, Chiara Marañón, Rosa Ferré, Garbiñe Ortega, Esther García, Leire Apellaniz o Marian Fernández, and helps through programmed mentoring to the development of the students’ projects, or offering accreditation and specific professional itineraries to the students during the Festival.

The involvement of the Festival, both in the conception and in the Academic Direction of EQZE, is part of a general strategic commitment by which the event wants to become an international reference platform for training, project development and professionalization of filmmakers.

In 2019, when the EQZE has only been in existence for a year, the University of the Basque Country has recognized the EQZE post-graduate courses as master’s degrees with an equivalent academic value and, where appropriate, the same professional effects as those actually taught at the University.
On 7 December 2019, the Festival started to share its archives with the general public thanks to the project’s first public event, held in the Tabakalera cinema and serving to look at the transformation experienced by the Festival in the early years of the Transition, when it turned into a laboratory of cinematic and political experimentation in a context of intense social unrest. The group of EQZE students, headed by Pablo La Parra, cast their eyes back over experiences such as the work of the Barrios y Pueblos Committee and the Cycle of films by women which, in 1978, gathered a number of female directors in San Sebastian including Věra Chytilová, Larisa Shepitko, Agnès Varda, Cecilia Bartolomé and Vivian Ostrovsky. These last two moviemakers met again in the city 41 years after the event together with the members of the Donostia Women’s Assembly, organisers of the initiative. Dialogue was also established between the past and present with showing of the film Expediente, directed by Carlos Sanz and Manuel Coronado, winner of the Golden Shell for Best Short Film in 1977, and the performative screening by filmmakers Luis López Carrasco and Raúl Liarte.

Exhibition: The Festival has had 24 editions. We don’t like it at Artium

The San Sebastián Festival, Elias Querejeta Zine Eskola film school (EQZE) and Artium, Basque Museum-Centre of Contemporary Art in Vitoria-Gasteiz presented the exhibition The Festival Has Had 24 Editions: We Don’t Like It from September 8 to December 8. The exhibition focused on the 1977 San Sebastián Festival, the first that was held after transferring its management to the city of San Sebastián. The exhibition brought together a great deal of material from the Festival Archive, much of it unpublished, such as letters, documents, photographs and magazines. The project was linked as a case study to the Artium Museum Collection exhibition entitled Zeru bat, hamaika bide. Prácticas artísticas en el País Vasco entre 1977 y 2002 [Zeru Bat, Hamaika Bide: Artistic Practices in the Basque Country in the Period 1977-2002] and it was part of the project Zinemaldia 70: all possible stories, promoted by the Festival and EQZE.
